

Guiding Principles for Members

The Door and Hardware Institute (DHI) is a professional association of individual members. The conduct of each member affects the reputation of the Association as a whole. An association with a strong positive reputation in the marketplace for professionalism and competence benefits all members individually. For this reason, DHI has published this statement of guiding principles to encourage all members to conduct themselves appropriately and professionally.

We pledge to actively work to improve the safety, security and convenience of the built environment.

We pledge to recommend the selection and use of products appropriate in quality and harmonious in design for each Project.

We pledge to maintain our individual skills by participating in continuing education and to actively support educational opportunities for all fellow Industry professionals

We pledge to promote and support good business practices in the Organization that we work for and in the Association that we represent as members.

We pledge to conduct ourselves honestly and professionally in all of our dealings with customers, suppliers, and fellow industry professionals.
